College holding Latino Festival

Clackamas Community College will host Festival Latino, an opportunity for people from the Latino community to visit the college's campus and learn about the Clackamas' education and training programs, on Saturday, July 11.

The event is from noon to 4 p.m. in CCC's Gregory Forum. Activities include guest speakers, face painting and activities for children, light refreshments, business and merchant displays, college tours, and salsa and folk dancing. The festival concludes with a soccer game at the college's soccer field. All events are free and open to the public.
